WEDNESDAY
JULY 8, 1953

George Révay, of the Reader's Digest, came in to see me this morning to talk to me about European integration movements.

Don Cook, of the Herald-Tribune, visited me on a similar mission.

Frank Wisner, who is making an extensive tour of Europe, called on me and gave me a gloomy picture of the morale in the State Department in Washington due to the activities of Senator McCarthy and State Department Security Officer McLeod.

Dr. Wilhelm Hausenstein came urgently to advise me that Walter Hallstein was on his way down from Germany to see me and would like to meet me tomorrow morning somewhere outside of Paris to discuss some important matters. I suggested ~~that~~ we foregather at the Pavillon at Versailles.

We had a large dinner tonight for Mardi and John Hughes. Fortunately the weather was excellent so that we could use the garden as well as the house. Otherwise it would have been an impossible crush. There were the following guests: Madame Petsche, Ambassador Alphand, the Caraman Chimays, the Comtesse de Contades, Frank and Kitty Giles, Lord and Lady Granard, Monsieur Lesca, Baron and Baronne G. de Waldner, Cy Sulzberger, the Duc and Duchesse de Talleyrand, Ambassador de Staercke, Comte Robert de Billy, Ambassador and Mrs. Anderson, the Comte and Comtesse de Grammont, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherwood, Eve Curie, the Hoyer-Millars, Lady Norwich, Paul Auriol, Ambassador and Madame Van Starkenborgh, Madame de Fels and Griselda Forbes.
